

Vulnerable Person Advice Information in the Event of Hospital Admission

The Human Rights Act and the Mental Capacity Act are the main laws in the UK that protects my human rights. This law means staff in public bodies (includes local authorities and NHS) must always respect and protect my human rights, including during the Coronavirus period and when making decisions about restrictions and actions about the Coronavirus.

I have been recognised as a vulnerable person who may not be able to give you the relevant information to assist with my diagnosis and treatment
